The Streaming Supercomputer provides two orders of magnitude more global memory bandwidth per dollar than clusters of servers ($4 per M-GUPS).

Stream instructions such as load, store, and fetch & add hide latency by issuing a stream of memory operations with a single instruction. The memory, interconnection network and I/O interface of the streaming supercomputer system are designed to achieve high bandwidth.